Heads of Schools in This City Express Pleasure Regarding Decision

HARRISBURG, Oct. 13.—Provost Marshal General Crowder has called the attention of the State Draft Bureau to the fact that an act of Congress, effective October 8, includes dental students of military age in the provision relative to medical students.

Both of these at first were not subject to exemption and then the ruling was changed so they might enter the reserve corps.

President Wilson early in September prescribed the following regulations governing medical students:

"Hospital interns who are graduates of well-recognized medical schools or medical students in their fourth, third or second year in any well-recognized medical school who have not been called by a local board for physical examination may exist in the enlisted reserve corps provided for by Section 55 of the national defense act, under regulations to be issued by the Surgeon General; and if they are thereafter called by a local board they may be discharged on proper claim presented on the ground that they are in the military service of the United States."

BRITISH CRUISER PASSED GERMAN RAIDER SEADLER

American Sea Captain Reveals How Lumber-Laden Raider Was O.K'd After Inspection

HONOLULU, Oct. 13.—The famous German commerce raider Seeadler passed inspection of a British cruiser by assuming the disguise of a lumber carrier, according to Captain Isadore Smith, master of the American schooner H. C. Slade, one of the American victims of the German craft.

After capture by the British and subsequent escape the Seeadler put into Bremerhaven, a German port, and in December, 1916, fitted out as a motor schooner under command of Lieutenant von Luckner and a crew of sixty-eight, half of whom, according to Captain Smith, spoke Norwegian.

With forged Norwegian clearance papers and two four-inch guns concealed by a deckload of lumber, the vessel put to sea, encountered a British cruiser, passed inspection, mounted her guns and proceeded to sink thirteen vessels in the Atlantic.

Depredations of the Seeadler, a converted American vessel, were announced by the Navy Department October 4.

ARMY TO BE REORGANIZED

Efficient Men Are Needed Behind a Few Trench Fighters

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—America's National Army will be an army of specialists. Details of the War Department admitted this today as they saw their dreams of an army of a half million infantrymen gradually fading.

The United States is gradually learning that the major part of an army, under present war conditions, is not the front line. There are ten men behind the line for every man in the trenches.

With his forces already in Europe he has seen the need for trained men behind the lines. Pershing has made constant demands for men who can do mechanical work, men who can care for stores and other men in specialized lines of endeavor.

Other pressure has been brought to bear upon the General Staff to use the trained energy of the National Army in other lines than actual fighting.

Members of the British mission to the United States and other foreign officers have counseled constantly against too heavy fighting forces without a sufficient supporting force.

Within a few days the vocational census now being taken of the National Army will be completed. With this laid before the general staff there will be planned a general reorganization.

It is probable that some men will even be taken from the military forces and put at work in factories where their skilled labor can do much in aiding government work.

Thousands of others will be allowed to use their training in connection with the keeping up of the military establishment.

SECOND DRAFT QUOTA WILL BE CALLED SOON

War Department Lays Plans for Mobilizing Full National Army

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Discussion of the advisability of expediting the call for the second increment of the draft army now in progress at the War Department, and it appears likely that the date may be fixed for December or January.

Stabilization of the first increment of 637,000 men is far enough advanced to show clearly there will be a big deficiency for the seventeen National Army divisions. More than 250,000 of the first increment are still to be assembled, but it already is estimated that there will be available at the given cantonment quarters for an additional regiment at each post and at some for a full brigade of two regiments.

The strength of the new regimental organization is 2600 men. With a regiment lacking at each cantonment, this alone would mean a shortage of nearly 50,000 men. In addition, there has been authorized a separate division of negro troops, which means nearly 30,000 men withdrawn from the original number assigned to the sixteen cantonments.

The shortage is due partly to the necessity of taking out of the National Army men to fill up National Guard divisions. Two complete National Guard divisions of southern troops have been absorbed in this way.

The remnants of three other southern National Guard divisions will be consolidated to form a single divisional unit, and the surplus men from other camps will be sent South to make up the missing divisions.

Drafts on the National Army forces also must be made to fill up the enlisted personnel of the aviation service, the medical corps and the service battalions needed behind the fighting lines abroad. Eventually there will be 250,000 men in the last-named service alone, and aviation and the medical service will take nearly as many more, though not all of them will be taken from the National Army.

Operating to delay the calling out of the second increment to make good these shortages are several factors. Clothing and equipment is coming forward only at a rate that can meet the demands of the forces already called, and the railways have been overburdened with the job of moving the army and its necessities without hindering freight shipments vital to the Allies.
